Rededication of the
San Diego County
Administration
Center

July 16, 1998

The County Administration Center, which has been hailed by art critics and historians as “the best of all government buildings in San Diego,” was born out of the Great Depression.

Design of the County Administration Center was trusted to four San Diegans, Richard Requa, William Templeton Johnson, Louis J. Gill and Samuel Hamill.

Much of the tile work was designed by Chicago architect, Jesse Stanton.

Dedication ceremonies were held on July 16, 1938, during a visit to San Diego by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.
